5. Applying for a university and degree program in the UK is relatively straightforward. The best place to start is researching universities and degree programs to find the one that best suits your interests and career goals. Once you've made your decision, you can apply directly to the university through their website or via Edvoy. Most universities also require applicants to submit additional documents, such as transcripts and references. Additionally, international students may need to apply for a visa in order to study in the UK, so it is important to check all entry requirements before applying.
